MORMON SOCIAL CONDITIONS. Advantages of Town Life Blended with the Charms of Rural Existence. Social changes of a marked character will be wrought by the occupation of the arid region. In this matter also Mormon experience is luminous, says William E. Smythe in Century. Brigham Young sought to found his prosperity not only on industrial ethics, but also upon the happiness of the people. He would not tolerate idleness, and the walls of cobblestones still standing in the older portions of Salt Lake City were invented that the church might pay for the labor of men who would otherwise have been temporarily supported by charity. As a means of furnishing entertainment, Chiffoniers...... 9 00 to 30 various diversions were planned, including the Saturday night dance, led by the bishops of the wards. The leader's wisdom is almost as clearly exhibited in his social scheme as in his plan of industry. The central idea in it was the farm-village. A vilis selected in the midst of a tract of stores in Topeka combined. five thousand or six thousand acres to be colonized. In Utah there are many small valleys between the towering mountains, and the village site is generally located near the center of the valley, and near the river from which the water is diverted into canals on each side at a sufficient elevation to command the irrigable lands. The half a square mile is then laid out into blocks of four acres, with broad avenues between, and the blocks are divided into lots of an acre each. On these acre lots the farmers have their homes. Here also are their commodious barns. Here they have their poultry and swine, while considerable space is devoted to a market-garden. The farmer then has his farm on the outlying lands, which are divided into lots ranging from two acres up to twenty acres.

the farthest outlying farm is only two and a half miles. Most farmers traverse a much shorter distance to reach the farm from their homes. On the other hand, the women and children enjoy the important advantage of having near neighbors, while the church, schoolhouse, stores and post office are near at hand. Under this system the advantages of town life are blended to a very considerable degree with the charms of rural existence. It is a system full of delightful possibilities. The Mormons have realized its substantial advantages in neighborhood association; but their model will be much improved upon by many colonies of more recent establishment. Farm life under the old conditions has involved isolation. The hunger for human sympathy and company has driven thousands from the country to cities already overcrowded. This factor is responsible for many a social tragedy, as well as for the problems which have arisen in congested city populations. There is no reason why farm villages patterned after those of Utah should not have a social life and an outward beauty quite as pleasing as, for inthe architecture seems almost uniformly pleasing. Attractive lawns, with trees, vines and flowers, are everywhere. People of small means will be able to surround themselves with similar advantages in the farm villages of the arid region, while realizing all the benefits of independence and equality inseparable from the industrial scheme of irrigation.

WEAPONS INDIANS FEAR.

They Don't Like to Face Telescopie Sights and Heavy Bullets.

"Indians sometimes face light firearms with great courage, but they fight shy of the attentions of any weapon that sends a large projectile," said Col. F. A. Blake, who has had wide experience on the western plains. "The rush and scream of the heavy bullets frightens them, and they prefer to keep away from their range. To that not unreasonable prejudice is due the fact that the buffalo hunters of the early '70s, who in following their business were constantly exposed to the attacks of hostile Indians, were molested comparatively little by them. The long, heavy rifle, with its telescopic sights and the knowledge of the deadly certainty of the buffalo hunter's aim, almost invariably served to make the red man keep his distance, and set him temporarily free from the notion of scalp hunting.

"One buffalo hunter by the name of Murdock, that I knew, was creeping apon a herd on the Staked Plain when he spied a band of Comanches riding toward him. He instantly leveled his gun upon them as a warning that they should not approach too near. Checking his warriors, the chief of the band pointed with his hand to a buffale in the distant herd, then mentioned in the Indian language that the hunter should shoot it. Murdock fired as the chief indicated and the buffalo fell. The Indians gave a loud 'How' of approval, waived their hands, turned their ponies

A TOOTHACHE'S PAIN. Scientists Claim That One Cannot Afterwards Recall Its Sensation. If an ordinary person, who has at some time in his career experienced the miseries of toothache, were asked From the public park in the center to | if he remembers the pain in question there is very little doubt as to what his response would be. Unquestionably he would say he remembered it. But this incautious admission might lead at once to controversial difficulties, for it appears that psychologists are in doubt as to whether anyone can under any circumstances remember a toothacke or any other pain. It seems desirable to follow this statement at once with the assurance that it is not a joke. Psychologists, as a rule, are not humorists, and they have no thought of being funny when they assert that pains and other sensations cannot be remembered. Those of them who hold this view are strictly in earnest, and mean exactly what the words imply in their most sober sense. They are perfectly aware that we commonly speak of remembering pains, and suppose that we do remember them. But they contend that in such a case we remember not the pain itself, but the ideas that were associated with the pain. We remember, for example, that we were unable to work because we had a toothache; that we applied remedies to it unsuccessfully; that finally we went to a dentist and had stance, the suburbs of Boston. There | the tooth extracted and at once gained relief. All this we remember very vividly, as everyone admits. But, it is said, we do not retain in our minds the slightest trace of the pain itself as a memory, or of the sensation of relief that came when the pain ceased. To the person not accustomed to looking sharply into the dark corners of his own mind this will no doubt seem a very unnecessary splitting of hairs. But the psychologists do not so regard it. They are discussing the matter pro and con with a good deal of vigor, this being, indeed, one of the controversies that go to make up the current history of that world apart in which the philosophers live. - Harper's saks the London Christian World, and this is the answer: "After reading Saturday's 'special' number of the Schoolmaster' on the subject of 'Halftimers,' we find it difficult to answer that question in the negative. An inspector writes: 'I examined a child who rose at 5:80, worked at a mill, and then walked a couple of miles to examination. Another girl of eleven rose soon after 5 a. m. and walked through the frost and snow nearly two miles to the mill. Work commenced at 6 and continued till 8:80, when there was an interval for breakfast-the child not leaving the mill. At 9 work again till 13:30'-six hours in all-'and then dinner at the mill.
